Bady       Rear N       Mode       Alor       Alor       Mandadia		News Jobs Library Contact Search site or staff
<text>         Accord       Moves         Accord       Accord to prote out controls         Control       Accord to prote out controls         Prote out controls       Accord to prote out controls         Protect out controls       Accord to prote out controls         Protect out controls       Accord to prote out controls         Protect out controls       &lt;</text>		Current students Current state
<section-header>         American Company       Participany Company         Company       Company     <th>Study Research</th><th>Industry About Alumni International students</th></section-header>	Study Research	Industry About Alumni International students
Advance under a contract of the contend of the contex of the contract of the co	About News News	i
Advance profile       Research holps retail officiency         Gregow and Kooksow       Decision         Gregow and Kookoksow       Decision	A ha	News
Cargonas and kotokas       Research helps retail officiency         Corea       Johan January         Corea       Decision 1         Corea       Decision 2         Decision 2
Circci     Circci       Even     Circci       Factor     Circci       Circci     Circci	Academic profiles	Research helps retail efficiency
Circci     Circci       Even     Circci       Factor     Circci       Circci     Circci	Campuses and locations	rise
Land     real.       Fordiars, instrukter and dialoxa     The instruction and dialoxa       Guerg is GUT     Courrensite of theoresity of Technology (QUT) for award wrining business systems design experi- professor in a factories.       Guerg is GUT     As Chair of Real Innovation, Polessor Rector leads research in theoreping new wrining the streatory of interactive prior systems School, is leader reasor.       Four guide     Polessor Rocker forcuses and information systems reasor.       Port guide and academic celerator     Polessor Rocker forcuses and information systems reasor.       Port guide     Polessor Rocker forcuses and entition of segrefieree of customers as they set should relate resperience of customers as the should put celetaboration will improve fresh foed operations from a customer perspecifie, improve size to bajetice processes and involve Woolwohth's staff a customer perspecifie, improve size to bajetice processes and involve Woolwohth's staff a customer perspecifie, improve size to bajetice processes and involve Woolwohth's staff a customer perspecifie, improve size to bajetice processes and involve Woolwohth's staff a customer perspecifie, in prove size to bajetice processes and involve Staff is engage with customers. The staff, infraind respecifie to customer and the diversity of effectively and disclevely and disclevely and disclevely and disclevely and disclevely and disclevely and discleve respecifie to therespecifie trending op	Contact	10 444 typ
Factors: instants and values	Events
Output Output Output Output Science and Eacher: As Chair of Real Innovation, Polessor Recker Lides issearch in the develop in eve was of identifying innovation potential in real. He wall as to all as eacher: to all hospital is established by a significant on is habing the stressort of to all science and instable information systems School, a leady machain reasers and instable information in stressort best stressort of to all science and instable information systems School, a leady machain reasers. Professor Recker focuses particularly on popula processes and technology, and aims to improve the supermarket shopping.In Feel Real Innovation Professor Jan Recker read instable information systems School, a leady machain reasers. In the instable information systems School, a leady machain reasers.In Feel Read Innovation Professor Jan Recker read instable information systems School, a leady machain reasers.Professor Recker focuses particularly on popula reserve and tactilesProfessor Recker said the research group aimed to identify the chracteristics that mathe some implementation across all Wookooth's 'stores.Verty qualifications onlineProfessor Recker said the research group aimed to identify the chracteristics that mathe some implementation across all Wookooth's 'stores.Verty qualifications onlineProfessor Recker said the research group interes of all allowing stores to speech do result in significations on an one of lifetionly an office chroup and allowing stores to speech do result in signification conting the thore officially and more seconds and the officially and more expected for result in signification conting information in the professor function of allowing information in andian diverging processes, entabling operation in a net or store staft to respare with customer and science a	Faculties, institutes and divisions
Relative     Professor Jan Recket:       As Charr of Relation Imposition, Professor Recket last sensativity of the stategy of DUT's information Systems School, a leading mitorial research.     Imposition in the instrumption in estategy of DUT's information Systems School, a leading mitorial research.       Professor Recket rouses particularly on people research.     Professor Recket rouses particularly on people superminate information systems school, a leading mitorial research school mess with systems to professor Recket rouses particularly on people superminate information systems school, a leading mitorial research school mess with system school superminate information school mess with school school messor with school persection from a customer perspective, improve school school school messor with school implementation across all Woolworth's stores.       Werly qualifications online School school school implementation across all Woolworth's stores.       "Werly qualifications online School School	Giving to QUT	Queensland University of Technology (QUT) for
Acts       Acts of the least in diversion in diversion in tests of inclusion in tests. He will be addition that the information is strategy of diversifying increases and technology, and alms is trategy of addition of the least in the strategy of addition in the strategy of addition of the least information is system research.         Poet gide       Professor Recker focuses particularly on poets process and technology, and alms is training to information is system research.         Professor Recker focuses particularly on poets process and technology. and alms is unique collaboration will improve fresh food operations from a contomer perspective, improve store bigblics processes and involve Wookworth's staff in ongoing improvement is at they set about their stores and the divelog's new of alms and the divelog's best practices in both areases and involve Wookworth's staff.         Verity qualificators online       Professor Recker stores in this unique collaboration will improve fresh food operations from a customer perspective, improve store bigblics processes and involve Wookworth's staff in ongoing improvation activities.         Verity qualificators online       Professor Recker stores in this unique collaboration will improve fresh food operations from a customer perspective, improve store bigblics processes and involve Wookworth's staff.         Verity qualificators online       Professor Recker stores and the divelog's power and the divelog's best practice's inclusion in bakery processes.         Verity qualificators online       Verity mining that by dovokorth's isotes.         Viet in finding that by dovokorth's isotes.       Verity relation in bakery processes and alos at new technologies and processes, enabiling operations to run	Glossary	Professor Jan Recker.
Roy dates and academic calardar       Independent of the states prior states of the strates prior of the strates pri	-
Key dates and scatteric calendar       OutTo: Information Systems School, a leading national research institute in information systems as they cale about they infore search institute in information systems as they set about their information systems as the set about their information systems as they set about their information systems as they set about their information systems as they set about their information systems as the set about their information systems as the set about their information systems as the set about their information systems and their search the Woolworth's is that made some frach doclades more successful than others and then develop best practices in bolicies for implementation across all Woolworth is tores.         Wrify qualifications online       "Wrify finding that by developing best practices in both areas we are simplifying processes, enebling operations to num one efficiently and allowing stores to spend more time dealing directly with consumers.         "Wrife finding that by developing best practices in both areas we are simplifying processes, and baby the search more by Woolworth's is to be compatibulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smatter ways to shop," he said.         "Wrife finding that by developing bact practities in both areas and in crucial to findi	JODS
Next       Protessor Recker focuses particularly on people process and technology, and aims to improve the sponience of customers as they set about their       Chir of Retail Invovation Professor.Jan Recker leads research that will make spoping more innovative.         Putcless       The initial research streams in this unique collaboration will improve firsh food operations from a customer perspective, improve store logistics processes and involve Woolworths' staff in organing imovation activities.         Virify qualificators online       Professor Recker said the research group aimed to identify the characteristics that made some firsch food operations in bake processes and involve Woolworths' staff in organing imovation activities.         Virify qualificators online       Professor Recker said the research group aimed to identify the characteristics that made some firsch food operations from a customer prespective, improve store logistics processes and also at new technologies and processes that nabel stores to results in significant cost savings but take in more time for store staff to ergage with customers, the said.         "We're finding that by developing best practices in both areas we are simplifying processes, enabling operations to run more efficiently and effectively and allowing stores to spend more time dealing directly with consumers.         "We expect to have initial research results available by the end of 2012."         OUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean, Professor Martin Betts, said the research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail.         "Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smater ways to shop? In e said. <t< td=""><td>Key dates and academic calendar</td><td>QUT's Information Systems School, a leading</td></t<>	Key dates and academic calendar	QUT's Information Systems School, a leading
Egent guids       Professor Recore Tractages particulary on people. process and technology, and aims to improve the supermarket stopping.       Recker leads research that will make shopping more innovative.         Policies       The initial research streams in this unique collaboration will improve fresh food operations from a customer perspective, improve store logistics processes and involve Woolworths' staff in ongoing innovation activities.         Verify qualifications online       Professor Recker said the research group aimed to identify the characteristics that made some fresh food uteles more successful than others and then develop 'best practice' policies for implementation across all Woolworths' stores.         Verify qualifications online       We've been boking at innovations in bakery processes and also at new technologies and processes that enable stores to replenish tehese more efficiently - a move expected to result in significant cost savings but also in more time for store staff to ongage with customers.         We've been boking at innovations in bakery processes and also tar new technologies and processes that enable stores to replenish tehese more efficiently - a move expected to result in significant cost savings but also in more time for store staff to ongage with customers.         "We've been boking directly with consumers.       "We've been to have initial research results available by the end of 2012."         OUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean. Professor Marin Betts, said the research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail.       "Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smatrer ways to shop," he said.         "Woolworths	News	research.
Our university       experiments of shopping.         Packols       The initial research streams in this unique collaboration will improve fresh food operations from a customer perspective, improve store logistics processes and involve Woolworths' staff in ongoing innovation activities.         Verify qualifications online       Professor Recker said the research group aimed to identify the characteristics that made some fresh food outlets more successful than others and then develop 'best practice' policies for implementation across all Woolworths' stores.         Werky qualifications online       Professor Recker said the research group aimed to identify the characteristics that made some fresh food outlets more successful than others and then develop 'best practice' policies for implementation across all Woolworths' stores.         "We vie been looking at innovations in bakery processes and also at new technologies and processes that enable stores to replenish shelves more efficiently - a move expected to result in significant cost savings but also in more time for store staff to engage with customers,' he said.         "We vie finding that by developing best practices in both areas we are simplifying processes, enabling operations to run more efficiently and effectively and allowing stores to spend more time dealing directly with consumers.         "We expect to have initial research results available by the end of 2012."         OUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean, Professor Martin Betts, said the research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail.         "Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is cruciat to finding better and smarter ways to shop,' he said.	Expert guide	process and technology, and aims to improve the Recker leads research that will make
Services and facilities       customer perspective, improve store logisities processes and involve Woolworth's 'staff in origoing innovation activities.         Verify qualifications online       Professor Recker said the research group alimed to identify the characteristics that made some fresh flood ouldes more successful than others and then develop 'best practice' policies for implementation across all Woolworths' stores.         'We've been looking at innovations in bakery processes and also at new technologies and processes that enable stores to replenish shelves more efficiently - a move expected to resout in significant cost savings but also in more time for store staff to engage with customers, 'he said.         'We've finding that by developing best practices in both areas we are simplifying processes, enabling operations to run more efficiently and allowing stores to spend more time dealing directly with consumers.         'We ve peet to have initial research results available by the end of 2012.*         QUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean. Professor Matrin Betts, said the research wore by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail.         'Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smatter ways to shop.' he said.         'This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge.*         Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today.         'Whe we peet to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of-the-box creative models fit for the tuture,' Pro	Our university	experience of customers as they set about them
Services and facilities         ongoing innovation activities.           Verify qualifications online         Professor Recker said the research group aimed to identify the characteristics that made some fresh food outlets more successful than others and then develop 'best practice' policies for implementation across all Woolworths' stores.           We've been looking at innovations in bakery processes and also at new technologies and processes that enable stores to replenish shelves more efficiently a move expected to result in significant cost savings but also in more time for store staff to engage with customers," he said.           "We're finding that by developing best practices in both areas we are simplifying processes, enabling operations to run more efficiently and effectively and allowing stores to spend more time dealing directly with consumers.           "We expect to have initial research results available by the end of 2012."           OUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean, Professor Martin Betts, said the research move by Woolwofts would help shape the future of retail.           "Woolwofths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smarter ways to shop," he said.           "This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base.           Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today.           We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of- the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said.	Policies	The initial research streams in this unique collaboration will improve fresh food operations from a
Verify qualifications online         Professor Recker said the research group aimed to identify the characteristics that made some fresh food outlets more successful than others and then develop 'best practice' policies for implementation across all Woolworths' stores.           "We've been looking at innovations in bakery processes and also at new technologies and processes that enable stores to replenish shelves more efficiently - a move expected to result in significant cost savings but also in more time for store staff to engage with customers," he said.           "We're finding that by developing best practices in both areas we are simplifying processes, enabling operations to run more efficiently and effectively and allowing stores to spend more time dealing directly with consumers.           "We expect to have initial research results available by the end of 2012."           QUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean, Professor Martin Betts, said the research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail.           "Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smarter ways to shop," he said.           "This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base.           "While the research itself will be publicly available, trials of new technologies, processes and systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge."           Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today.           "We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work w	Services and facilities
<ul> <li>fresh food outlets more successful than others and then develop 'best practice' policies for implementation across all Woolworths' stores.</li> <li>"We've been looking at innovations in bakery processes and also at new technologies and processes that enable stores to replenish shelves more efficiently - a move expected to result in significant cost savings but also in more time for store staff to engage with customers," he said.</li> <li>"We're finding that by developing best practices in both areas we are simplifying processes, enabling operations to run more efficiently and effectively and allowing stores to spend more time dealing directly with consumers.</li> <li>"We expect to have initial research results available by the end of 2012."</li> <li>QUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean, Professor Martin Betts, said the research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail.</li> <li>"Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smarter ways to shop," he said.</li> <li>"This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base.</li> <li>"While the research itself will be publicly available, trials of new technologies, processes and systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge."</li> <li>Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today.</li> <li>"We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of-the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said.</li> </ul>	Verify qualifications online
<ul> <li>"We ve been looking at innovations in bakery processes and also at new technologies and processes that enable stores to replenish shelves more efficiently - a move expected to result in significant cost savings but also in more time for store staff to engage with customers," he said.</li> <li>"We're finding that by developing best practices in both areas we are simplifying processes, enabling operations to run more efficiently and effectively and allowing stores to spend more time dealing directly with consumers.</li> <li>"We expect to have initial research results available by the end of 2012."</li> <li>QUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean, Professor Martin Betts, said the research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail.</li> <li>"Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smarter ways to shop," he said.</li> <li>"This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base.</li> <li>"While the research itself will be publicly available, trials of new technologies, processes and systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge."</li> <li>Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vasity different from what it was today.</li> <li>"We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of-the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said.</li> </ul> significant cost savings but also in more time for store staff to engage with customers," he said. "We're finding that by developing best practices in both areas we are simplifying processes, enabling operations to run more efficiently and effectively and allowing stores to spend more time dealing directly with consumers. "We expect to have initial research results available by the end of 2012." QUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean, Professor Martin Betts, said the research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail. "Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smarter ways to shop," he said. "This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cuting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base. "While the research itself will be publicly available, trials of new technologies, processes and systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge." Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today. "We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of- the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said. Media contact: Rose Trapnell, QUT media team leader, 07 3138 2361, 0407 585 901 or <ul> <li>"We're finding that by developing best practices in both areas we are simplifying processes, enabling operations to run more efficiently and effectively and allowing stores to spend more time dealing directly with consumers.</li> <li>"We expect to have initial research results available by the end of 2012."</li> <li>QUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean, Professor Martin Betts, said the research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail.</li> <li>"Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smarter ways to shop," he said.</li> <li>"This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base.</li> <li>"While the research itself will be publicly available, trials of new technologies, processes and systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge."</li> <li>Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today.</li> <li>"We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of-the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said.</li> <li>Media contact: Rose Trapnell, QUT media team leader, 07 3138 2361, 0407 585 901 or</li> </ul> time dealing directly with consumers. "We expect to have initial research results available by the end of 2012." QUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean, Professor Martin Betts, said the research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail. "Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smarter ways to shop," he said. "This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base. "While the research itself will be publicly available, trials of new technologies, processes and systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge." Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today. "We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of- the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said. Media contact: Rose Trapnell, QUT media team leader, 07 3138 2361, 0407 585 901 or <ul> <li>"We expect to have initial research results available by the end of 2012."</li> <li>QUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean, Professor Martin Betts, said the research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail.</li> <li>"Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smarter ways to shop," he said.</li> <li>"This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base.</li> <li>"While the research itself will be publicly available, trials of new technologies, processes and systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge."</li> <li>Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today.</li> <li>"We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of-the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said.</li> <li>Media contact: Rose Trapnell, QUT media team leader, 07 3138 2361, 0407 585 901 or</li> </ul>		enabling operations to run more efficiently and effectively and allowing stores to spend more
<ul> <li>QUT Science and Engineering Faculty Executive Dean, Professor Martin Betts, said the research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail.</li> <li>"Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smarter ways to shop," he said.</li> <li>"This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base.</li> <li>"While the research itself will be publicly available, trials of new technologies, processes and systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge."</li> <li>Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today.</li> <li>"We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of-the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said.</li> <li>Media contact: Rose Trapnell, QUT media team leader, 07 3138 2361, 0407 585 901 or</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>"Woolworths is to be congratulated for recognising that research is crucial to finding better and smarter ways to shop," he said.</li> <li>"This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base.</li> <li>"While the research itself will be publicly available, trials of new technologies, processes and systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge."</li> <li>Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today.</li> <li>"We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of-the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said.</li> <li>Media contact: Rose Trapnell, QUT media team leader, 07 3138 2361, 0407 585 901 or</li> </ul>
smarter ways to shop," he said. "This mutually beneficial arrangement will position QUT at the forefront of retail innovation research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base. "While the research itself will be publicly available, trials of new technologies, processes and systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge." Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today. "We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of- the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said. Media contact: Rose Trapnell, QUT media team leader, 07 3138 2361, 0407 585 901 or		research move by Woolworths would help shape the future of retail.
research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to develop their brand and customer base. "While the research itself will be publicly available, trials of new technologies, processes and systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge." Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today. "We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of-the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said. Media contact: Rose Trapnell, QUT media team leader, 07 3138 2361, 0407 585 901 or systems are being developed with Woolworths, giving them a competitive edge." Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today. "We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of- the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said. Media contact: Rose Trapnell, QUT media team leader, 07 3138 2361, 0407 585 901 or		research while at the same time providing Woolworths with cutting-edge ways of using IT to
"We expect to pre-empt the demands of customers and work with designers to develop out-of- the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said. Media contact: Rose Trapnell, QUT media team leader, 07 3138 2361, 0407 585 901 or the-box creative models fit for the future," Professor Recker said. Media contact: Rose Trapnell, QUT media team leader, 07 3138 2361, 0407 585 901 or		Professor Recker said shopping had the potential to be vastly different from what it was today.
ere have I been? News

Study

Industry

Research

Faculties

Institutes

Get in touch

Study areas Applying Student life	Research areas PhDs and research degrees Applying for research	Partnerships Expertise for industry Ways to partner with us	QUT Business School Creative Industries Education Health Law	Health and Biomedical Innovation Creative Industries and Innovation Information Security Sustainable Resources	Leave feedback Get email updates Connect on social media
About	Alumni	International	Science and Engineering		💽 🕞 阿 🥿 🛅 🔽
QUT Blueprint	Benefits	QUT in your country
Giving to QUT	Get involved	Student support
Accreditation	Keeping in touch	How to apply

Acknowledgement to the Traditional Owners

QUT acknowledges the Traditional Owners of the lands where QUT now stands.

CRICOS No. 00213J | ABN 83 791 724 622 | Last modified: 25th July 2012

Accessibility Copyright Disclaimer Privacy Right to Information